

In The News

Brian Miller Authors Outlook Series for The Hill on Securities and Exchange Commission's Future Under Trump Presidency

January 9, 2017

Securities Litigation Practice Chair Brian Miller authored a series of articles for The Hill on the future of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission under President Trump. Miller delved into the SEC's rulemaking and enforcement priorities before the 2016 presidential election and discussed how those dynamics may shift. In particular, he analyzed how the agency might change its focus from regulatory enforcement to capital formation.

The Hill: The Legacy of Mary Jo White

The Hill: How Will the SEC Change Under Trump's Picks to Lead It?

Related Work

Securities Litigation