

In The News

Major Class Action Calls for Venue Change

January 9, 2023

The gears continue to turn for one of the largest and most complex antitrust cases currently moving through the nation's courts. RealPage Inc. and a group of some of the largest multi-family property companies in the country asked the U.S. Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation to move a series of antitrust cases against them to Texas federal court. The judicial panel rejected a similar request in December but new claims have been filed since then around the country.

RealPage provides price-setting software to apartment management companies. Plaintiffs claim the Texas-based company and the named apartment companies created a cartel to manipulate rent prices.

Akerman Partner Ferdose al-Taie is serving as lead counsel for one of the defendants in the class action.

Click here to view this news.

Related Work

Antitrust and Trade
Regulation
Class Action Defense

Related Offices

Dallas
Washington, D.C.