vCard

Colby Berman focuses her practice on employment disputes, representing employers in state and federal courts, as well as in administrative proceedings, in a broad range of employment matters, including discrimination, harassment, retaliation, breach of contract, wage and hour, and varied labor law violations. She counsels corporate and nonprofit entities in an array of industries, including retail, hospitality, construction, education, healthcare, food services, security services, and restaurants.

Notable Work

Discrimination and Retaliation: Successfully secured summary judgment in favor of national optical retailer and its assistant payroll supervisor in a case alleging an employee was terminated in retaliation for taking disability leave, demonstrating that the termination was the result of an unrenewed contract between the optical retailer and co-defendant wholesale retailer and a legitimate reduction in force.

Discrimination and Retaliation: Successfully secured summary judgment in favor of petroleum services company, its branch manager, and its senior vice president in a case alleging that the employee’s inclusion in a reduction in force constituted gender discrimination and retaliation.
