Florida Government and Healthcare Leaders Convene at 2nd Annual Akerman Senterfitt Healthcare Briefing Co-Hosted with BB&T and McGladrey LLP

April 2, 2013

Three National Firms in the Legal, Financial, and Accounting Services Industries Provide All-Encompassing Program for Clients and Guests

A group of Florida's chief decision makers from the state's Healthcare Administration and health institutions convened at a breakfast healthcare briefing co-hosted by the national law firm Akerman Senterfitt, Branch Banking and Trust Company (BB&T), and McGladrey LLP, an accounting and consulting firm, to discuss the current landscape and future of healthcare in Florida.

Top executives from local businesses including physicians and physician groups, hospitals, insurance providers, and medical delivery systems attended the morning discussion, which featured panelists Phil Dutcher, chief operations officer of NCH Healthcare Systems; Dr. Jonathan B. Gavras, senior vice president and chief medical officer of Florida Blue; Ralph Lawson, executive vice president and chief financial officer of Baptist Health South Florida; and David Rodgers, assistant deputy secretary of Medicaid for Florida's Agency for Healthcare Administration. “Our stellar lineup of speakers addressed critical, timely issues that affect all stakeholders in the industry, including how quality care initiatives can translates into true cost savings, and how interoperability of electronic records can produce a wealth of knowledge to all healthcare providers and insurers,” said Slavkin. “Such interoperability allows all aspects of the industry to strategize together on cost-savings and efficiencies.”

The panel engaged the audience in an interactive discussion of topics stemming from the Affordable Care Act and Health Reform initiatives, focusing on the consolidation between payors and providers and the resulting impact on the cost and delivery of healthcare. The panel also shared their insights on Health Insurance Exchange models, Medicaid expansion, as well as healthcare mergers and acquisitions among health systems and health insurers, and joint operations of medical practices.

“With a diverse demographic in Florida, the state represents a cross section of the country,” said Kirk Davis, chair of Akerman Senterfitt's Healthcare Practice Group. “For our second annual event we partnered with firms with a deep understanding of the marketplace to present an exceptional panel that delivered not only thoughtful but creative insights on some of the most significant healthcare challenges facing businesses today.”
