December 4, 2024

As the United States prepares for a shift in political leadership, Akerman Chairman and CEO Scott Meyers shared his insights with The American Lawyer, forecasting a surge in client demand across diverse legal practice areas in 2025.

Meyers observed that change, regardless of direction, consistently drives the need for legal counsel. "One of the things that drives demand is change and, really, change in any direction. Among the practices Meyers highlighted is Akerman's immigration team, which is poised to assist with pre-immigration tax and visa planning to help employers navigate evolving regulations. While the article focused on immigration, Meyers also foresees heightened activity across several key areas, including bankruptcy, corporate mergers and acquisitions, private equity, financial services, government affairs, healthcare, intellectual property, labor and employment, litigation, real estate, and tax.

Akerman's strategic readiness across these disciplines positions the firm to guide its clients through the complexities of a rapidly changing business and regulatory environment. As Meyers' outlook underscores, the firm remains committed to
