Alberto Chávez focuses his practice on corporate and commercial litigation in Delaware's federal and state courts, with a special emphasis on the Court of Chancery. He draws on his comprehensive background in corporate law, procedural rules, and eDiscovery to devise effective strategies that cater to his clients' needs both in legal disputes and corporate management. Alberto has represented both corporations and alternative business entities in matters related to corporate governance, issues of advancement and indemnification, requests for books and records, and contract disagreements.

His dual experience in litigation and transactional work provides him with a distinct advantage. The insights gained from his litigation practice enable him to pinpoint crucial aspects of transactions, while his transactional experience equips him to persuasively argue for or against transactions in legal settings.
