Akerman is attending the ICSC+U.S. Law Conference, a premier gathering of retail real estate owners, developers, investors, retailers, and legal professionals focused on the industry's most pressing issues. During the conference, Jerry Reichelscheimer will participate in a roundtable discussion, "The Times They Are A-Changin: From Wellness Anchors to Experimental Pop-Up Stores – How the New Crop of Tenants Affect Your Shopping Center and Lease." The roundtable will explore how evolving tenant mixes are reshaping shopping centers and creating new legal and leasing considerations for owners, developers, and landlords. The discussion will examine key lease drafting challenges arising from the growth of medical, wellness, experiential, and pop-up tenants, along with practical strategies for addressing operational, regulatory, and risk management issues in today's retail environment.

Attorneys from Akerman's national real estate practice will join industry leaders and stakeholders from across the retail real estate sector at the conference to exchange insights on emerging trends, market developments, and the legal issues shaping the shopping center industry.
