Multifamily Development and Acquisitions

As nationwide supply struggles to keep pace with demand, fundamentals in the multifamily space have been, and remain, strong—resulting in growth opportunities for new development and existing product. With development and investment opportunities on the rise, experienced legal counsel is essential for successfully moving projects from conception to completion.

Akerman's leading real estate team represents major builders and institutional buyers of multifamily properties throughout the United States. Multifaceted in our approach, we assist clients in all aspects of the acquisition, ownership, repositioning, and disposition process, including purchase and sale agreements, joint ventures (with both domestic and foreign investors), financing, and property management agreements. If the project involves new construction or rehabilitation, we support our clients in navigating the entire development and construction process, including addressing complicated zoning and land use matters and design and construction-related agreements.

With significant experience in complex development projects and value-add strategies, our lawyers offer the experience and resources needed to complete transactions or projects of any size. We strive to provide business counsel in addition to legal advice to further our clients' business models and goals. As a testament to the quality of our work and the personalized level of service we offer, we receive
