Luis Perez, Alejandro Chevalier Offer Guidance for Tackling International Disputes, Uncertainty During COVID-19 Pandemic in Law360 Article

March 27, 2020

Luis Perez, Co-Chair of Akerman's Latin America and the Caribbean Practice, and Alejandro Chevalier wrote an article for Law360 offering guidance for companies in international disputes and facing uncertainty stemming from the COVID-19 pandemic.

“International dispute resolution is one of the practice areas deemed most affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Its international character, bringing together people from different nations to business meetings, hearings, and conferences, makes this field more prone to impact from different factors.

Besides, the economic and sociopolitical factors affecting popular arbitral seats, unavoidable disputes arising from breaches of contracts, fluctuations in commercial activity, and drastic changes in the global markets are currently inviting legal professionals to reevaluate how to protect their clients' interests.”
