Renee Oliyide is a real estate and urban planning professional with a concentration in land use and zoning in New York City. Renee regularly reviews land use applications for zoning actions to determine compliance, clarity, and completeness in adherence to the NYC Zoning Resolution, technical and procedural standards, land use planning policy, and various other planning considerations. She has experience identifying issues relating to the completeness and compliance of zoning applications to the NYC Zoning Resolution and other procedural requirements. With her professional degree in architecture, she assists clients with resolving zoning and policy issues with design in mind, and develops recommendations and strategies for the submission of complete and clear applications.
