A former vice president and senior legal counsel for the credit card and retail services division of HSBC, Eric Gribbin possesses deep knowledge of the financial services sector. He represents banks, finance companies, securities broker-dealers, insurance brokers, investment advisors, and other financial institutions in complex commercial litigation, regulatory and compliance, and transactional matters.

Eric has significant experience with private label, co-brand, and affinity credit card contracts and service agreements. He also represents credit card processors and money services businesses. His practice includes banking and UCC litigation, injunction proceedings, restrictive covenant and trade secret disputes, securities fraud litigation, and class action defense.

Notable Work

Banking Litigation: Represented BMO Harris Bank in a case of first impression nationwide, obtained trial court decision, affirmed on appeal, holding that a bank customer cannot unilaterally place a restrictive legend (“Void After 90 Days”) on checks in the age of electronic check processing.

Credit Card Advice: Represented a top credit card issuer in the negotiation and drafting of a credit card contract with a major sports league in which the team logos appeared on the credit cards.

Auto Litigation: Represented a major auto lender in obtaining settlements in which our client paid nothing in exchange for the dismissal from two class actions in Ohio state court alleging complicity with an auto dealer in a fraudulent scheme to sell allegedly unnecessary automotive add-on features.

Credit Card Compliance: Represented a retail client in the design of a compliance training program on best practices in accepting credit card payments for our client’s employees.
